Manager Commentary

Interest rates remained relatively stable over the third quarter of 2020. Central bank actions, as well as assurances that short-term interest rates should remain at low levels for some time, led to significantly reduced volatility in the bond market. This stability in interest rates occurred despite the increasing possibility of a V-shaped economic recovery as Canada, the U.S. and other world economies showed surprising resilience during the pandemic. The U.S. Federal Reserve Board communicated its intent to change its inflation target from an annual measure to one that targets an average inflation rate over many years.

quarter gross domestic product forecasts signalled a strong rebound, although momentum could wane in the fourth quarter of the year.

The fund maintained overweight exposure to corporate bonds as credit spreads (the difference in yield between corporate and government bonds of similar maturity) remained wider than earlier in 2020. The manager expects corporate bonds to outperform government bonds in the coming year.

Despite the second-quarter economic downturn, third-
