Manager Commentary

During the third quarter of 2022, stock selection was the most significant contributor to the fund's performance, particularly in the information technology sector. Top contributors to performance included the information technology, energy and consumer discretionary sectors. Underweight exposure to communication services also contributed.

The most significant individual contributor to performance was ON Semiconductor Corp., whose shares outperformed after the company reported better-than-expected revenue and earnings. The company unveiled its second silicon carbide substrate manufacturing facility, which was positively received. It is on track to expand its capacity and remains well positioned as one of the few vertically integrated suppliers of system-on-chip solutions.

The health care, utilities and consumer staples sectors detracted from performance. An underweight allocation to consumer discretionary detracted from performance, as did stock selection in consumer staples.

Tyson Foods Inc. was the most significant individual detractor from performance after the company reported a mixed quarter. Revenues were better than expected, but earnings missed expectations as a result of lower margins. Profitability in the pork segment weakened, and the company expects margins to be 2% lower in the pork business for the next two quarters.
